

fracture mechanics of ceramics pdf

With the natural maturing of the fields of structural ceramics, this symposium focused on nano-scale materials, composites, thin films and coatings as well as glass. The symposium also addressed new issues on fundamentals of fracture mechanics and contact mechanics, and a session on reliability and standardization.

The rising fracture toughness (K_{Ic}) of zirconia ceramics is the result of a stress induced martensitic transformation from the tetragonal to the monoclinic structure at the crack tip region. The tetragonal to monoclinic (t-m) transformation is accompanied by a volume increase that induces compressive stresses around the propagating cracks.
